

ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIELD SCHOOL

PROGRAM 2020
Populonia, Italy
June 14th- July 11th 2020

Archeodig
Archaeological Field School

The Roman coastal settlement of
POGGIO DEL MOLINO

Announcement

The Archeodig Project announces the opening of applications for its 2020 field season at the Roman seaside settlement of Poggio del Molino (Populonia, Tuscany).

Excavations at Poggio del Molino will be entering their twelfth consecutive year under the direction of Archeodig, an international archaeological project supported in the United States by the University of Arizona.

The archaeological site of Poggio del Molino overlooks the Tyrrhenian Sea on a promontory forming the northern edge of the Gulf of Baratti, today a popular beach destination but in Etruscan and Roman times an important center of trade and iron production. At the southern edge of the gulf, just a few kilometers away, rests the Roman city of Populonia. During its long history, the territory around Populonia (including the Gulf of Baratti and Poggio del Molino itself) shifted from Etruscan to Roman control, a process which still presents many unanswered questions and remains a key research focus of the excavations at Poggio del Molino.

Poggio del Molino preserves many centuries of diverse activities and phases of construction including a Roman fortress, a fish-sauce production facility, a seaside villa, and a late antique settlement. After a decade of work, the details of how these changes unfolded over time are still being understood by the archaeologists of the Archeodig project. As an organization which places public and student involvement as a top priority, Archeodig seeks student volunteers for the 2020 field season who wish to develop a foundational knowledge of field archaeology and contribute to the many interesting and ongoing research questions posed by the site of Poggio del Molino.

PROJECT DESCRIPTION

The archaeological field school at Poggio del Molino includes a two-week option and a four week option for university students.

The purpose of the field school is to provide basic instruction in archaeological field practice (including excavation, documentation, and artifact analysis) as well as to provide students with the opportunity to become of a part of the Poggio del Molino community.

Students will additionally have the option of participating in a variety of field laboratories which will provide specialized instruction on ceramic analysis, bone analysis, restoration, archaeological topography, and 3D photogrammetry.

On select days of the week, students will attend lectures and site visits that provide a contextual basis for the knowledge they will gain in the field.

SEASON

June 14, 2020 to July 11, 2020

SESSION DATES

4 WEEK SESSION (for academic credit)

lasts June 14-July 11, 2020

2 WEEK SESSION

lasts June 14-June 27, 2020

CREDIT

Up to 6 hours offered via the University of Arizona

NO EXPERIENCE REQUIRED

No field experience or language requirements are necessary for participation. All are welcome to apply.

ACCOMMODATIONS

Students will stay in comfortable apartments located in Piombino, a city about 15 minutes away from the excavation.

Apartments will include a fully equipped kitchen and basic amenities.

LIVING IN PIOMBINO

Piombino is a lively coastal city with a world class archaeological museum and a walkable historical center.

After site and during the weekends, students will be free to explore the city as they wish and get a taste for life in a coastal Tuscan town.

FEES

$3200 (4 week period)

$1800 (2 week period)

TUITION

$1,000 (circa; optional)

APPLICATION DEADLINE

April 1, 2020

HOW TO APPLY

For application details please contact:

Tyler Johnson at

tylerdjo@umich.edu

